

How many items can be placed in the locker

What makes a good locker system?

A well-planned locker system can enhance user experience and streamline operations. The ideal locker size depends on the available space, the items to be stored, and the specific needs of your facility. By considering these factors, you can select lockers that maximize storage efficiency and meet user requirements.

How do I choose the right storage locker size?

Deciding on the right storage locker size requires understanding your facility's needs and layout. A locker that's too small can frustrate users, while one that's too large wastes valuable space. Storage lockers typically range from W (300/400)D (400/450/500)H (1800/1900)mm.

What size locker do I need?

Standard locker dimensions are a good starting point, but customizing sizes can better suit your facility. For instance, Z-shaped lockers are ideal for facilities where users need to store both long coats and smaller items. Using multiple columns per unit can save space and reduce costs.

How many columns should a locker have?

Using multiple columns per unit can save space and reduce costs. For example, 20 lockers can be arranged as six 3-column units and one 2-column unit. This setup ensures a neat appearance while maximizing storage capacity. How Do I Choose a Locker? Selecting the right locker involves more than just size.
