

Is the manufacturing industry a key sector for Mozambique's development?

Despite the five-year plans indicating the manufacturing industry as a key sector for Mozambique's development, the interests of individuals and groups linked to FRELIMO have taken precedence over the interests of the State.

What are Mozambique's economic prospects?

On the trade front, Mozambique will have to secure a favourable trade deal with the US, either bilaterally or as part of a southern African grouping, to ensure that cordial financial relations are maintained. Overall, Mozambique's economic prospects remain solid.

What is the industrial sector in Mozambique?

During this period, the Mozambican industrial sector was concentrated in food, beverages and tobacco production, with an average of 46% of the sector's total production. The non-metallic minerals area, with an average of 14%, was the second largest contributor, and the chemical products area, with 10%, the third.

Why is industry a problem in Mozambique?

Despite some periods of growth and investment, industry's contribution to GDP has remained below the targets set, reflecting a lack of cohesive strategy and effective implementation. The disappearance of key industries, such as Mozambique's Mabor, highlights the urgent need for a robust and sustainable industrial policy.
